Nowadays there are thousands of ways to get knowledge. By learning new information we study life and ourselves. It makes me think about ignorance. How ignorant ~~we~~ are?

As for me, the more we know the more we understand our own ignorance. Things we were used to do now don't mean so much. Every single day is a chance to learn more about ourselves. For example now I do not believe in Santa Claus as I did 8 years ago because he is not real obviously. In the conclusion I'd like to say that even if we understand our ignorance it's not a reason to stop learning new information. Diversity of means to get something is unbelievably ^{enormous}. I fairly agree with this statement. In my opinion ~~it~~ it is even better if we know our ~~disadvantages~~.

Today, there is lots of interesting points of view on education. One of them, is ~~a~~ words of Will Durant - "Education is a progressive discovery of our own ignorance. Let's think about this."

The problem of this words is that ~~if~~ they have two different sides. On the one hand, ~~education is an interesting process, full of good things and wonderful moments. Also, it makes you smart and educated.~~ ^{is that you studying and making smarter yourself. By reading a lots of books and educational process, full of good things and wonderful moments. Also, yourself, you're starting to be a smart human.} But on the other hand, ~~is that we spending much~~ you start to understand that you will never learn ~~an~~ everything, because your mind has an informational edge and there is no border of studying something. So, of course you cannot know anything. So there will be the moment, ~~when~~ you will understand, that you know not so much as you want to. There ~~is~~ ^{are} a good words of ~~Socrates~~ ^{ancient} greek philosopher - ~~I know~~ "The only thing I know is that I know nothing". It characterises this situation well.

As the conclusion, I'd like to say, that I partly agree with Will Durant, because ~~the is~~ ^{I have} two radically different points of view on this problem.

"Education is a progressive discovery of our own ignorance"

~~I think~~ Education is a progressive discovery of our own ignorance. I think that this quotation means that. Our knowledge of the world is expanding. We discover a lot of new information even about things that we thought were so simple. But among people that want to develop our ~~the~~ inventions, find out more about our life and nature ~~there~~ there are people that ignore education.

Firstly, I suppose the love for books, knowledge should be practised in everyones family. Parents should be a good example for their children, so they can have a happy life, a successful life. Because I hope that all parents wish their very best for their babies.

Secondly, I think that ignoring education nowadays is impossible, every day we resive a lot of information, but without being able to digest it, it's useless. Not being able to read or write a human won't get very far trying to live a social ~~to~~ life.

To sum up, I would like to say that growing educated people will help us understand who we are. Develop ourselves and become better. It will help us to never stop looking, thinking and discovering. Ignorance is not a way to live. It will stop ~~us~~ ~~us~~ trying to be the best version of ourselves.

No doubt, that the problem of ignorance is very important in our modern world. And one of the things that can help people to get rid of ignorance is education.

Firstly, while we study at school or at the university, we broaden our mind. We learn a lot of new things and facts, study different sciences. And, of course, it makes us clever and 'highly educated people'. 66

Secondly, when we study, we communicate with other people who are around us, and this way we learn how to behave in our society. We acquire many important rules of behaviour. And nobody will deny that it is very useful to be socially developed not to be ignorant.

In the whole, the statement of Will Durant reflects the main goal of education, even the sense of it. The process of education itself must show people what they know or what they don't, and if they don't, the education needs to "teach" people. That is how education can help people to get rid of ignorance.

Will Durant, the U.S. historian, said: "Education is a progressive discovery of our own ignorance".

In my view, it means that the further you get in learning anything new, the more you understand what you need and what you don't. In simpler words that means that in any educational activity there is a point where you must choose a part of particular science. And at most every time science is hard and you are forced to ignore all the other parts of it or otherwise it would be very hard to figure something out. The reason of me thinking that is my own experience, because I am a student and I am studying a number of sciences. Such as ~~Maths, Physics~~, maths, physics, biology, chemistry and others. And if you will not choose you will lose a lot of time and eventually would not be good at any.

In a conclusion I would say: "So many people, so many minds". But in my mind this statement perfectly right.

Will Durant (U.S. historian) think that "Education is a progressive discovery of our own ignorance".

I agree with him about his opinion on the problem. Learning more, we start to understand, that we don't know anything. The more we learn about a subject, the more we realize that we don't know anything about this subject.

Preparing for exams, we realize that we know little of this subject. I think that we need to be serious about learning something. Education helps not to be ignorant and develop. Today if you don't have certain knowledge, you cannot become what you want to be.

Nowadays, to be uneducated is not prestigious. We must expand our knowledge. And I can say that it is true that education is a progressive discovery of our own ignorance.
